

Take your pick, there are 68 to choose from

- ▶ Ottawa eatery, The Works, announced London expansion earlier this week
- ▶ Restaurant to offer 68 different kinds of burgers when it opens

London Mayor Joe Fontana takes a big bite out of a burger with plenty of bacon, havarti cheese and chipotle ketchup at the soon-to-open The Works gourmet burger bistro at 145 King St. yesterday.

KYLE REA

METRO NEWS

Published: April 07, 2011 2:00 p.m.

A burger with plenty of meat and even some sass, or a veggie-themed burger with tangy sauce on the side ... which would you pick?

It certainly wasn't an easy choice I faced as I picked what will soon become the Metro London burger, to be featured at The Works gourmet burger bistro, 145 King St. The name chosen for the burger is true to our motto: Metro's Burger Worth Sharing. If you enjoy plenty of meat with a little something extra thrown in with your news as much as you like it on a burger, it's definitely one to try.

Expansion co-owner Kris Hunt, born in London, said the Forest City was The Works' first choice to expand. To celebrate its arrival, local dignitaries and media were invited to come out and name a burger.

Placed in front of me were two choices — one had Gouda cheese, bacon and avocado, the other cucumber, tomato, red pepper and curry mayonnaise on the side. At first it seemed obvious that the combo of bacon, cheese and avocado would win out. But the curry mayo made the taste buds sing, which made for a tough choice. In the end, the variety of tastes offered by the bacon, cheese and avocado combo made for the better taste experience.